Text:

Prof Belgacem Haba is one of the most successful Algerian researchers in the domain of electronics around the globe. He holds more than 1100 patents and he's classified as one of the top researchers in terms of their number of patents.

Dr Beghdadi met him at Stanford university and made this interview.

Dr Baghdadi: Welcome Prof Haba, How was your childhood?

Dr Haba: I was born in El-Oued. I grew up in a small village where most of families were suffering from poverty. There was not electricity that time. I used to study under the light of the candle.

Dr Baghdadi: How have you overcome all these obstacles in your life?

Dr Haba: I never give up. I am patient, ambitious, self confident and hardworking. I worked so hard on my dream to come true.

Dr Baghdadi: What event has changed the whole course of your life?

Dr Haba: The moment when my son was born, was a moment that changed my life. He was born with disability. It taught me many things.

Dr Beghdadi: What about your career? What are the different degrees you've got?

Dr Haba: I completed the (DES) in physics at the university of Houari Boumediène, (ME) in applied physics at Stanford university and the (PhD) in the same filed. Now I'm in IBM's research labs in New York.

Dr Beghdadi: What advice you give to students in general?

Dr Haba: You must have a goal and work harder on it, believe in yourself and evaluate yourself each time and adapt your plan according to the short comings your get.

Dr Beghdadi: Thank you so much Dr Haba.

Dr Haba: You're welcome. Thank you for you, too.
